Are We Human? Notes on an Archaeology of Design
Beatriz Colomina & Mark Wigley
Thursday 8 June, 6.30
AA Bookshop

Beatriz Colomina and Mark Wigley, curators of the 3rd Istanbul Design Biennial, will give a joint presentation on their new book Are We Human? Notes on an Archaeology of Design – a 'taste' of their notes from the field to unveil not only the ways in which design has gone viral, but also how it makes us human. It becomes the way humans ask questions and thereby continuously reinvent themselves but it is also the way the species anaesthetises itself against the shock of such radical transformations.

'Architectural spaces can take away or awaken the abilities and sensations that us humans possess innately,' writes Japanese architect Go Hasegawa, who for this lecture will address how can we expand our abilities and sensations with architectural spaces, especially from the perspective of spatial dimension, gravity and time.
